GOOD NEWS, HOUSTON

Houston Endowment boosts Artists Relief Fund

The Houston Endowment has pledged $100,000 to the Greater Houston Area Artists Relief Fund, the largest gift to date for an effort launched in early April to provide financial support to artists and other arts professionals whose livelihoods have been upended by the COVID-19 pandemic. The grant reflects the endowment's ongoing commitment to support and sustain Houston's arts community, said president and CEO Ann Stern. "This is about giving a much-needed lifeline to Houston artists that serve as the lifeblood of this vibrant, ever-evolving city. We encourage others to join us in this critical charge during this unprecedented time." As of Monday morning, other donations to the fund totaled more than $80,600, and more than 310 individuals had applied for its grants, which are limited to $1,000. As federal support begins to arrive, many artists are still unable to qualify for unemployment, and their needs continue to soar. "Until we can connect them to longer-lasting support systems, this fund will help them feed their families, stay safe in their homes, and stay healthy," said Leigh Smith, board chair of the Houston Arts Alliance, which is managing the fund. The endowment has deployed parallel efforts for other COVID-19 relief efforts, including up to $2 million for the Greater Houston COVID-19 Recovery Fund, including the lead gift of $1 million and a challenge grant of an additional $1 million to encourage giving by others. The challenge grant contributes another $1 for every $4 given. The Houston Endowment also has provided capacity-building support to the resource, findchildcarenow.org, which aims to ease the burden for essential workers in Houston who are struggling to find child care.

Igloo gives $100,000 from sales to help Houston health workers

By Katherine Feser
STAFF WRITER

Igloo, a privately held manufacturer of coolers based in Katy, donated $100,000 to the CDC Foundation's Coronavirus Response Fund.

The funds, which were generated from 100 percent of the profits on sales of Playmate Coolers on Igloocoolers.com over the last 30 days, will be used to secure and deliver personal protective equipment such as masks and gowns to the Houston Department of Health. Igloo has extended the promotion on Playmate Coolers sales through May 1. "The PPE will directly and positively impact the health and wellbeing of the incredible health care workers in the local community that is home to so many of Ig-loo's staff, families and friends," Igloo President and CEO Dave Allen said in an announcement. "We extend our most gracious thanks to those on the front lines."

The CDC Foundation collaborates with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, philanthropies, private entities and individuals on combating COVID-19 and other causes.
